

Cheque clearing company signs up to Milton Keynes.

“Since moving we’ve been impressed at how well the city is geared up to offer a great work/life balance.”

David Grier, Managing Director,
Alphatec

“We had the ability to dictate the design, layout, location and even the view in our own purpose-built premises. That would not have been possible in any other city.”

There comes a time when a business needs its own premises. For practical reasons, so that working spaces can be tailored exactly to suit the way it’s used. And for emotional reasons, so that the company can construct its image or live up to its brand values.

Alphatec, an IT company specialising in the finance and insurance sectors, had reached that stage. The business began life in Scotland and was instrumental in the design and build of a completely new image-based cheque clearing system commissioned by the Royal Bank of Scotland.

Following its successful implementation, other blue chip banking sector brands became clients, including Barclays and NatWest.

So, why Milton Keynes? Simply put, it offers the potential to build a truly bespoke environment in a new-build. Not just the choice of windows or doors or shrubs around the car park, either. Alphatec was, within reason, given free rein to design a building that fulfilled all its requirements. Right down to a commanding view over the city: it has to be seen to be believed, especially at sunrise. And all walking distance from the railway station that whisks you 35 minutes down the track to London.

On top of this, Milton Keynes offered Alphatec’s staff and families a lifestyle that would be impossible anywhere else.

Alphatec, it’s fair to say, is a very happy company. Which is possibly a contributory factor to the business being listed in the Sunday Times TechTrack 100 list two years running.

Alphatec first moved to Milton Keynes in 1998 and is now recognised as one of the region’s leading technology and support companies.

Alphatec expanded its head office in Milton Keynes in 2007.
